Mr. Ritesh Singla began the session by extending a heartfelt welcome to all attendees, including faculty members, students, industry professionals, and distinguished guests. He expressed gratitude about the fundamental differences between counselling and consulting. The keynote session by Dr. Deepak Prabhakar Bhagwat provided valuable insights into the fine distinction of each field, highlighting their objectives, methodologies, and applications. The primary objective of the workshop was to clarify the distinctions between counselling and consulting, two professions often merged due to overlapping aspects. By explaining the unique roles, responsibilities, and approaches of counsellors and consultants, the workshop aimed to equip students with a deeper understanding of these disciplines and assist them in making informed career choices.

The workshop began with a clear definition of counselling and consulting, emphasizing their respective scopes and objectives. Participants learned about the remedial approaches utilized by counsellors, including cognitive-behavioural therapy, psychoanalysis, and person-centred therapy.

Students gained insights into the empathetic style adopted by counsellors to foster trust, empathy, and rapport with clients. The workshop highlighted the more structured, outcome-driven interactions characteristic of consulting engagements, where consultants collaborate closely with clients to diagnose issues, formulate strategies, and achieve predefined objectives.
